

Application Development & Support

Today's businesses are critically dependent on the key applications that drive, control, monitor, and grow their operations. Yet many struggle to manage the volume of development work and support costs necessary to ensure that their applications can accommodate business growth.

Comprehensive Software Lifecycle Management

Kforce Global Solutions helps companies overcome these challenges with our comprehensive Application Development and Support services. Representing our core business, these services span the entire software development lifecycle, including:

- Requirements Gathering and Definition – Experienced business analysts work directly with business members or BAs to ensure documented requirements match company needs
- Design and Architecture – Skilled solution architects design custom solutions tailored to specific business problems, technologies, and environments
- Technical Specification – Proficient technical leads turn the architecture into specifications for development
- Development – Talented developers create the solution utilizing Global's proven methodologies or the client's preferred methodology
- Testing – Meticulous testing specialists perform component, interface, system, and acceptance tests to ensure applications perform as expected
- Release – Adept infrastructure engineers prepare and coordinate releases to production environment
- Support – Seasoned support specialists proactively monitor, test, and maintain the environment to maximize availability and proactively address issues

We utilize mature, proven processes built around a traditional V-model, customized based on client requirements. We have the flexibility to operate within various client-driven Software Development Methodologies, including Agile, and provide skilled technical resources and diligent project management. Our support team also works with each company to design a service level agreement (SLA) that meets specific business and operational requirements.

Delivering Value

At Kforce Global Solutions, we align our proven methodologies with the client's needs to drive significant value, including:

- Substantial cost reductions over traditional onshore and/or offshore engagements
- Access to the appropriate skill sets and experience levels to meet immediate needs
- The ability to redirect internal resources back onto core business needs
- Flexibility to rapidly respond to shifting skill and resource needs
- Improved performance in business operation audits
